Wabash Plain Dealer temporarily cutting back on pages due to sports cancellations

Due to the cancellation of college and professional sports, the Wabash Plain Dealer is cutting back the number of pages of the daily newspaper temporarily. Local high school sports are temporarily canceled, but our news reporters will strive to bring you local coverage of our student-athletes inside of our A-section. The Wabash Plain Dealer is devoted to providing the best product to its customers and appreciates the support of the community during this time. Thank you.

Wabash Plain Dealer offices closed to the public through March 27

Following is a message from David Holgate, Group President, PMG Community Newsgroup, LLC:

"To reduce risks to our employees, the Wabash Plain Dealer office will be closed to the public through March 27. Our employees will continue their work to get important information out to the community, and customers can reach our office by phone and email. We will continue to publish a paper five days a week and provide our readers with news and information just like we have done for 160 years. Our coverage of COVID-19 will be posted on our website www.wabashplaindealer.com as soon as possible and updated throughout the day. It is never easy to deny access to our business, a community business, but these are unprecedented times and require unprecedented decisions. To reach our office, call 260-563-2131 or email news@wabashplaindealer.com. Thank you for your continued support of the Wabash Plain Dealer."

Holcomb closes K-12 schools until May 1 due to COVID-19

Wabash County declares code yellow travel advisory

By ROB BURGESS
Wabash Plain Dealer Editor

As Gov. Eric Holcomb announced several new cases of COVID-19 in the state, he also mandated all K-12 schools in the state close until May 1, in addition to other measures.

Meanwhile, Wabash County officials made several announcements including changes to official services and the issuance of a travel advisory.

Travel advisory

In a statement to the Plain Dealer on Thursday, Wabash County Commissioners Barry Eppley, Jeff Dawes and Brian Hauptert announced several measures to combat COVID-19.

These will remain in place until further notice.

The Wabash County Board of Commissioners, with the support of the Wabash County Health Department and other appropriate agencies, have declared a code yellow travel advisory effective immediately.

"Travel only as necessary such as to and from work," stated the commissioners.

The Wabash County Courthouse and Wabash County Health Department will be closed to the public except by appointment. Payments and other documents for these offices may be placed in a large locked box located just inside the west basement door of the courthouse.

The Wabash County Judicial Center will be closed to the public on Wednesday and Friday. On Monday, Tuesday and Thursday there will be limited access to the building but individuals need to call in advance. A drop box is located outside, near the top of the stairs, for depositing payments and documents.

Business with all county offices may still be conducted via telephone, email or the county website.

For more information, visit www.wabashcounty.in.gov or call the Courthouse at 260-563-0661 ext. 1222, Wabash County Judicial Center at 260-563-0661 ext. 1239 or Wabash County Elections office at 260-563-0661 ext. 1238.

Two arrested after fight ends with shots fired

Incident occurred March 12 in North Manchester

By ROB BURGESS
Wabash Plain Dealer Editor

In a statement to the Plain Dealer on Thursday, North Manchester Police Department (NMPD) Chief Jim Kirk stated two people were arrested after a fight allegedly ended with shots fired.

Kirk stated that at around 4:21 p.m. Thursday, March 12, officers from the NMPD responded to a fight in progress with shots fired in the 500 block of Kech Street.

Kirk stated three males at the scene were questioned.

Jonathan S. Hopkins, 24, Akron, was arrested for reckless discharge of a firearm. According to court records, a bond of $10,000 was paid Thursday.

Austin M. Lakes, 23, Connersville, was arrested for intimidation.

The case was sent to the Wabash County Prosecutor's Office for review.

"A criminal charge is merely an accusation," stated Kirk. "Every defendant is innocent until proven guilty."

Honeywell Foundation announces COVID-19 protocols

Various venues with programming affected through April 11

STAFF REPORT

In compliance with Gov. Eric Holcomb's instructions and with an abundance of caution, the Honeywell Foundation announced Wednesday they were suspending all events at their properties including the Honeywell Center, Honeywell House, Eagles Theatre, Dr. James Ford Historic Home, and Charley Creek Gardens through Saturday, April 11.

"The Foundation is actively working with agents, managers, artists, and partners to reschedule performances when possible. Guests will receive updates via email and social media as quickly as they become available. Guests are asked to hold on to their ticket(s) as they will be honored for the rescheduled dates. In the event of a show being canceled on behalf of COVID-19, guests will receive a 100 percent refund and will be contacted directly by the foundation with more information on how to receive the refund. If guests are unable to attend a rescheduled event, a 100 percent refund will be issued," stated the release.

The Honeywell Center will be closed to public entry including Eugenia's Restaurant. Patrons may call in to place a carry-out order with Eugenia's starting at 9:30 a.m. every Monday to Friday. Orders will be hand-delivered to the patron's vehicle. The pasta and salad bars will not be available for purchase via carry-out order. To place a carry-out order, call 260-563-1103.

The Honeywell Foundation Educational Outreach Program will continue to keep students engaged in its programming as well as assisting teaching with e-learning options. Beginning Friday, March 20, the Honeywell Foundation Facebook page will post music, storytelling and visual arts programming including Visual Thinking Strategies (VTS) conversations and Arts Integration learning modules.

Spring Break Bash offered at the Honeywell Center, Charley Creek Gardens, and Eagles Theatre from April 7 to 9 will be offered online through the Honeywell Foundation website and social media channels.

"Stay tuned for updates on the programming that will be offered during this time," stated the release.

Don't resist resistant starches

DEAR DOCTOR: I keep reading about something called "resistant starch." People are saying I should get it into my diet. Why is it so important? How much do I need?

DEAR READER: As with so many areas of diet and medicine these days, the answer

Elizabeth Ko & Eve Glazier
Ask the Doctors

leads directly to the gut microbiome. That's the vast and complex community of bacteria, fungi, yeasts and viruses that live in our intestines. They number in the trillions, can account for 2 to 5 pounds of our weight and, as we're learning every day, play complex and crucial roles in our physical and even mental health. In fact, because these microscopic creatures are necessary to survival, the gut microbiome is increasingly regarded as an organ in its own right.

One of the keys to a healthy and diverse gut microbiome is keeping our microscopic residents well-fed. This involves prebiotics, a type of dietary fiber that stimulates the growth and activity of the good-guy bacteria in the gut. For fellow science nerds, prebiotic foods contain high levels of a starchy substance known as inulin and certain types of sugars, including fructo-oligosaccharides and galacto-oligosaccharides. Although apples, oats, lentils, leeks, Jerusalem artichokes, garlic, asparagus and bananas are cited as good sources of prebiotics, the fact is that a wide range of fruits, vegetables, grains and legumes contain prebiotics in varying amounts.

Another potential source of prebiotics is the subject of your question – resistant starch. As the name suggests, these are starches, or carbohydrates, that resist digestion. That means they survive the journey through the digestive tract and make it all the way to the colon, where they become available to gut microbes. Resistant starches fall into four general categories. They may be protected by fibrous cell walls, as with grains, seeds and legumes. They are available in certain raw foods, such as raw potatoes or raw plantains. And they can be manufactured via a chemical process. What's of particular interest is the final category. This is a range of carbohydrates that, when cooked and then cooled, develop into resistant starch. These include rice, potatoes, yams, pasta and whole grains such as oats and barley.

One benefit is that, instead of being broken down into glucose and raising blood sugar levels, these types of carbohydrates pass into the colon. This improves glycemic control, an important factor in good health. Once in the colon, resistant starches feed the beneficial bacteria that live there. Through the process of fermentation, bacteria turn resistant starch into compounds known as short-chain fatty acids. These include butyrate, which is linked to lower rates of colorectal cancers, and propionate, which has been shown to lower inflammation and improve immune support.

How much resistant starch do we need? There's no set amount. Instead, think in terms of daily goals for dietary fiber in general. Most Americans get less than half the recommended 25 grams per day for women and 38 grams per day for men. We recommend eating from a diverse range of fresh fruit, vegetables, whole grains, legumes and nuts. If they're new to your diet, add them slowly to avoid gas and bloating. And with every bite, know you're making your gut microbiome very happy.

of the Wabash Circuit Court, and Benjamin D.R. Vanderpool, of the Wabash Superior Court, issued an action plan relating to COVID-19.

“(We) are acutely aware of the challenges presented by the outbreak of COVID-19. The outbreak requires that the Courts take extraordinary measures in order to continue to provide access to justice in Wabash County consistent with the health and wellness needs of our community,” they stated. “The Courts expect the outbreak of COVID-19 will require such extraordinary measures for at least several weeks.”

They stated these changes would last through at least May 4.

The Wabash Circuit and Superior Courts, as well as, Court Services (Probation and Community Corrections divisions) will be closed to the public Wednesday and Fridays beginning Friday, March 20, through April 3.

“The situation will be monitored and either continued, amended, or discontinued at the discretion of the courts,” they stated. “The judicial officers have submitted a petition to the Indiana Supreme Court given the severity of the situation and these extraordinary measures. They have requested that the Supreme Court declare that emergency exists in Wabash County under the authority of Administrative Rule 17, and to make emergency orders for Wabash County directing and allowing the courts and clerk of Wabash County to alter, modify, and suspend necessary procedures.”

They stated they will work with the Wabash County Sheriff “in addressing the wellness needs of the Wabash County Jail population.”

“Court proceedings will continue to be conducted to the extent doing so is prudent,” they stated. “Every effort will be made to ensure that access to justice will remain available in Wabash County. Requests for continuances of trials and hearings will be considered in light of the outbreak, and personal and community wellness needs will be carefully considered. Attendance at hearings by telephone and video conferencing, including but not limited to all hearings involving defendants in criminal cases, will be encouraged whenever possible and when consistent with the rights of the parties and the interests of justice. Attorneys will be allowed to participate in pre-trial conferences by telephone without filing a motion. The courts will take reasonable steps to limit the number of people attending hearings to those who are essential to the proceedings being conducted, subject to the requirements of all applicable rules.”

They stated the cleaning of facilities would also be a high priority.

“The courts and their staff will work with Wabash County maintenance personnel so that all appropriate steps are taken to see that Wabash County Court facilities are in an appropriately safe and sanitary condition,” they stated. “The courts will support and encourage compliance with mandatory preventative measures like quarantines and isolations, protect potentially vulnerable staff, and be prepared for situations such as school closings that could impact court staff. Employees under official quarantine/isolation orders are authorized to work from home without further approval needed. For employees tangentially affected by COVID-19 by actions such as school closures – or who might be vulnerable demographics or have underlying health conditions, etc. – who cannot or do not wish to be in the office, the presumption is that they will use benefit time to cover their absence from the office. But judicial officers will have the discretion to authorize and require those employees to work from home, considering the following non-exclusive set of guidelines: Age and capacity of children affected by the school or childcare closures; availability of additional spouse or family support; underlying medical conditions or vulnerabilities; evidence of symptoms; nature of the employee’s job and ability to be performed remotely; and availability of resources to support remote work by the employee. Employees are not required to work from home – they may still use benefit time if available and desired. Where necessary to the essential function of the courts, however, judicial officers are authorized to require employees to work remotely.”

They stated they would remain in regular communication throughout the outbreak with the Wabash County Prosecutor’s Office, Wabash County Sheriff, Court Services (Probation and Community Corrections), the Wabash County Board of Commissioners, the Wabash County Board of Health, and the Wabash County Chief Public Defender.

“The cooperation and coordination with all such officials and agencies will remain a high priority,” they stated. “Changes to the ... protocols are likely to happen very quickly in an attempt to maintain the safety and wellbeing of all involved.”

Number of confirmed cases in state climbs

The Indiana State Department of Health (ISDH) reported 17 new positive cases of COVID-19 on Thursday, bringing to 56 the number of Hoosiers diagnosed through ISDH, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) and private laboratories.

Two Hoosiers have died. The new cases involve residents of Howard (3), Lake (1), Marion (8), Owen (1), St. Joseph (2), Tippecanoe (1) and Wayne (1) counties.

Holcomb announces school, economy, unemployment insurance changes

Holcomb took additional “unprecedented” actions Thursday by signing executive orders that extend the closure of schools, provide economic relief and protections for individuals and businesses, and expand unemployment insurance benefits for those impacted by job loss, according to a press release.

Daily COVID-19 testing capacity in Indiana has expanded with the addition of a new partnership between the Indiana State Department of Health and Eli Lilly and Company, and at least one other entity has initiated testing this week. In the past 24 hours, about 200 tests have been completed.

Holcomb will extend the current state of emergency an additional 30 days when it expires on April 5.

All K-12 public schools will remain closed until May 1. Non-public schools are also ordered closed. This date may be revised to extend through the end of the 2019-2020 school year if circumstances warrant.

All-state mandated assessments will be canceled for the current academic year.

The governor has contacted U.S. Secretary of Education Betsy DeVos to share the state’s plan and also has asked the Superintendent of Public Instruction Dr. Jennifer McCormick to pursue any federal waivers needed to cancel the requirements for accountability, chronic absen-teism and state-mandated assessments.

The state of Indiana will align with the federal government to delay state income tax payments from April 15 to July 15. The U.S. Treasury extended the deadline to pay federal income tax by 90 days.

Penalties will be waived for 60 days for property tax paid after May 11. The state will work with counties that may experience cash flow stress because of the delay.

The state will not immediately move forward with using $300 million in reserves to pay for several capital projects approved in the just-concluded legislative session and instead maintain the flexibility to utilize the funds as needed for relief efforts and to maintain current services. The state will consider using bonding authority to move forward with the just-approved capital projects.

Providers of essential utility services such as gas and electric, broadband, telecom, water and wastewater services are prohibited from discontinuing service to any customer during the public health emergency.

The state’s application to the U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA) was approved on Wednesday. This program provides targeted, low-interest loans of up to $2 million to help small businesses and nonprofits overcome the temporary loss of revenue as a result of coronavirus. For more information, visit SBA.gov/Disaster.

The state will interpret Indiana’s unemployment laws to the broadest extent possible to cover Hoosiers who are out of work because of COVID-19.

Benefits will be paid to individuals who file their initial unemployment claims late.

The Department of Workforce Development (DWD) will allow individuals to continue to accrue unemployment eligibility if they take work leave because of COVID-19.

DWD will seek federal authorization to provide unemployment benefits for those who are not otherwise eligible for unemployment, such as individuals who have recently started a job.

For employers, DWD will not assess certain experience rate penalties because of employees who receive unemployment benefits because of COVID-19.

No residential eviction proceedings or foreclosure actions may be initiated during the public health emergency. This does not relieve the individual of obligations to pay rent or mortgage payments.

All public housing authorities are requested to extend deadlines for housing assistance recipients and required documentation to show eligibility for housing programs.

The Indiana Department of Financial Institutions and Indiana Community Housing Development Authority are required to work with financial institutions to identify tools to help promote housing stability.

Participants in the Healthy Indiana Plan (HIP) and the Children’s Health Insurance Program are not required to make premium payments.

Job search requirements are waived for those applying for Temporary Assistance to Needy Families (TANF) benefits.

The Family and Social Services Administration will seek a federal waiver to extend renewals for existing Medicaid and HIP recipients.

Telehealth services for mental health, substance use disorder and prescribing for Medicaid covered services will be expanded.

The commissioner of the state Department of Insurance will request that insurers institute a 60-day moratorium on policy cancellations for non-payment of premiums. This does not suspend a policyholder’s obligation to make payments.

The commissioner will request that health insurers not increase prices or coverage costs that involve medical care for COVID-19.

To limit the number of in-branch transactions, late fees will be waived for several driver’s licenses and identification card renewals, vehicle registrations, titles, and certain other transactions.

Other operational changes in branches are being instituted to provide for the safety of employees and customers in branches, such as spacing between terminals and limiting the number of customers in the lobby.

Requirements have been relaxed for veterans to qualify for awards from the Military Family Relief Fund.

Awards in excess of $2,500 may be approved by the IDVA director during the public health emergency.

Mental health professionals are permitted to practice via telemedicine.

Advance Practice Registered Nurses are allowed to provide services in multiple locations.

The state health commissioner may waive the requirements of the nursing home certificate of need statute to respond to COVID-19 issues for long-term care facilities.

Lilly, ISDH partner to accelerate COVID-19 testing

Eli Lilly and Company announced Wednesday that its scientists are partnering with the Indiana State Department of Health (ISDH), with support from the Food and Drug Administration (FDA), to accelerate testing in Indiana for SARS-CoV-2, the virus that causes COVID-19, according to a press release.

“Lilly will use its specialized research laboratories to analyze samples taken in Indiana healthcare facilities, including nursing homes and emergency rooms. Assuming the company can continuously access required diagnostic reagents, this should start to expand the state’s ability to conduct testing and receive a timely diagnosis of individuals who suspect they may be carrying the virus. IDOC expands suspension of visitation, adds free video and telephone calls

While there continue to be no known cases of COVID-19 among staff or offenders at Indiana Department of Correction (IDOC) facilities, the previously announced suspension of all facility visitations was expanded Wednesday to include all facility volunteer staff, according to a press release.

“The decision to expand the visitor suspension to include volunteer staff is precautionary in nature. Any decision to end or extend the suspension of visitations or the admittance of volunteer staff will be made in the best interest of our staff and the offenders housed at IDOC facilities. This decision will be reviewed every two weeks,” according to a press release. “Family and friends affected by the suspension of visitations to offenders may be able to connect by telephone or video from the approved IDOC service provider.”

In a separate release, the IDOC announced “to lessen the strain on offenders and their loved ones the result the COVID-19 virus,” officials worked with the telephone and video service provider to permit each eligible offender the opportunity for two five-minute-long phone calls, as well as one video visit of either 10 or 25 minutes each week and fee-free.

This agreement runs through April 14.

Additional precautions in place at Parkview facilities

Parkview Health is implementing additional precautions to mitigate the spread and impact of the novel coronavirus 2019 (COVID-19) pandemic, according to a Wednesday press release.

All Parkview facilities are implementing tightened visitor restrictions, and the Parkview Cancer Institute is adding procedures to protect cancer patients arriving for treatment or appointments.

Additionally, due to the suspension of elective and non-urgent surgeries, Parkview Ortho Hospital and Parkview SurgeryONE will temporarily close.

Hospital visitor restrictions

Effective Thursday, March 19, all Parkview Health hospitals and emergency departments will implement a no visitor policy. Exceptions to this policy are limited to:

■ Family Birthing Centers: One authorized adult visitor for the duration of a patient’s stay.

■ Neonatal ICU: Two authorized adult visitors for the duration of a patient’s stay.

■ Pediatrics: Two authorized adult visitors for the duration of the patient’s stay.

■ Emergency department: One authorized parent/guardian per pediatric patient for the duration of the patient’s stay.

“Exceptions for end-of-life care will be authorized on an individual basis. Authorized visitors will continue to be identified with a wristband provided to them by hospital staff. Additional visitors will not be permitted in lobby areas,” stated the release. “To implement these restrictions and protect Parkview patients and co-workers, non-essential hospital entrances will be closed.”

Visitors should use the following entrances:

■ Parkview Behavioral Health Institute, Parkview DeKalb Hospital, Parkview LaGrange Hospital, Parkview Huntington Hospital, Parkview Noble Hospital, Parkview Wabash Hospital and Parkview Whitley Hospital: Main entrance and emergency entrance.

■ Parkview Warsaw:

Emergency entrance

■ Parkview Hospital Randallia: Main entrance, Entrance 2, Entrance 4 and emergency entrance.

■ Parkview Regional Medical Center campus: Entrance 1: Parkview Regional Medical Center; Entrance 2B: Parkview Women’s & Children’s Hospital; Entrance 10: Parkview Heart Institute; Entrance 12: Parkview Cancer Institute; and during evening hours, entrances will be restricted to hospital emergency departments and the Parkview Women’s & Children’s Hospital Entrance 2B.

Clinic visitor restrictions

At all FirstCare Walk-In Clinics, no visitors will be permitted except for the parent or guardian of a minor or a patient caregiver.

At all other Parkview Physicians Group clinic locations, visitors will be limited to one adult per patient. Additional visitors will not be permitted in lobby areas and are asked to wait outside or in their car.

Parkview Cancer Institute

“Because many cancer patients have compromised immune systems and are at a higher risk for contracting viruses and infections, the Parkview Cancer Institute (PCI) is implementing new processes to limit patients’ risk of exposure to COVID-19,” stated the release.

Beginning March 19, patients arriving at PCI should drive up to Entrance 12 before parking. Under the canopy, patients and anyone accompanying them will be asked several health screening questions and will have their temperature checked. The outcome of this screening will allow staff to identify patients who may need further screening and evaluation before receiving treatment or participating in an office visit.

“To protect patients and co-workers, visitors are limited to one adult per patient, and visitors who have a fever or any respiratory symptoms will not be permitted at PCI,” stated the release.

Patients will be contacted with additional information prior to appointments. For more information, call PCI at 260-266-7100 or 833-724-8326.

Parkview Ortho Hospital and Parkview SurgeryONE

Due to the suspension of elective and non-urgent surgeries, Parkview Ortho Hospital and Parkview SurgeryONE are temporarily closed.

Parkview Health previously announced the suspension of elective and non-urgent procedures for all other facilities. Patients whose surgeries need to be postponed will be contacted.

All other Parkview hospitals will continue to perform medically necessary, urgent and emergent surgeries. Urgent and emergent orthopedic surgeries in Allen County will be performed at Parkview Regional Medical Center and Parkview Hospital Randallia. Patients who wish to electively cancel their procedures should first contact their provider to discuss potential health implications.

LETTERS GUIDELINES

The Wabash Plain Dealer encourages your letters to the editor forum, which is designed to be a forum for exchange of ideas between readers about issues of community importance.

Please sign your letter. Your name will be used with the letter that is published in the Plain Dealer. Your letter will be returned if it is your desire to remain anonymous.

Since we may want to write or call you to verify the letter, we ask that you include your address and telephone number. All our letters to the editor are published in the interest of fair play, so we trust our letter writers will refrain from personal attacks on other persons or groups.

A letter should be less than two pages long, preferably of double-spaced typing.

In order to give everyone an opportunity to participate in this exchange of ideas, please try to limit your letters to one per month per household.

To submit a letter, please write the Wabash Plain Dealer at 99 W. Canal St., Wabash, IN 46992.

Letters also may be hand-delivered to the newspaper office, 99 W. Canal St. The office is open 9-11:30 a.m. and 1-4 p.m. Monday through Friday. If you should deliver a letter during non-business hours, a drop slot is located to the left of the front door. Letters may be faxed to 260-563-0816, or email them to wabashplainedeal.com with "Letters to the Editor" in the subject line.

OUR TAKE

Together, we are strong

Many of our readers have asked a series of great questions that lack definitive answers. Exactly how many tests are in Wabash County? Exactly how many people have been tested here? What is the community's healthcare threshold? Exactly how long does it take to get test results back? It's not because we're not asking them. It's because this situation is fluid and it's something our community hasn't seen before. This kind of data should be provided by those in charge of distribution.

Our local leaders are doing a great job of answering as many questions as they can, but the Indiana State Department of Health is only providing statewide numbers for testing right now. The one thing we do know is that a healthy dose of transparency would be great right about now. Transparency is something we all need to fight for with or without a pandemic on our hands. It's vital to our freedom. Even though there's been a trend to distrust the media over the past three or more years, people who are passionate about fiscal conservatism and limited government should want to see more laws that require the government to be transparent with its actions. A county newspaper is not reporting on Capitol Hill. A county newspaper is reporting from the courthouse square, taking a pulse of the community and holding our government officials accountable. Without a critical eye, without a member of the public in the nearly-empty room where public meetings are held, without scrutiny and the ability to share differing opinions, the public is left in the dark, in more ways than we care to pay attention to. Although we would like to know the exact number of tests and the answers to our lingering questions, we also must trust and remain calm. There are plenty of things we can do to protect ourselves and our neighbors. Right now, the lack of testing taking place in America means we should take every precaution to not contract COVID-19. There could be cases here in our community according to our health officials in Wabash County. It's not a question about if, it's when. The Indy Star is reporting that some tests take days to get results back, which means days pass before people who've come in contact with that person get notified. During this time, we should do our part to slow the spread, especially until we get an accurate picture of this pandemic. Obviously, we are in a time of national emergency, according to President Donald Trump. We ought to remain calm because our public health officials have studied long and hard for this. By each doing our part, we are protecting the most vulnerable in our community. During these unprecedented times, we need to support each other. We should heed the cautions of health professionals to socially distance ourselves, but it's important that we keep in contact with our neighbors. The internet is an incredible thing. We can remain in contact with each other and share valuable information. It makes transparency possible. For those who may live in rural areas that don't have internet access, or if you know your neighbor isn't tech-savvy, you can knock on your neighbor's window and speak through the pane of glass to both protect yourself and your neighbor by understanding their needs while not coming in close contact. While we all remain calm, vigilant and informed, our reporters will continue to fight for answers. We will continue to do our best during this time. Although the doors of our building are shut, we remain committed to keeping the doors of the government open, always. When we get answers, we will report them. Together, we are strong.

Most were casually dressed, as was Hanke, who was seated in his office. At one count, more than 100 had joined the service, which meant that at least 200 would have been seated in the pews on a pre-coronavirus Sunday. Zoom, which I hadn't experienced previously, made possible what the virus had made impossible – the gathering of community in common prayer and worship. At one point, some attempted to sing a hymn a cappella. Let's just say, the Apostle's Creed and the Lord's Prayer were smoother. More novel than the virtual service was the experience of joining a friend of 20 years in prayer. Our more-natural bonding experiences have revolved over the years around journalism and, in the sole interest of anthropological research, shopping. For just a moment, I wasn't sure which pitch and volume I should seek. But something happened that was both personal and intimate – and yet of all one thing. Perhaps this is why so many people attend a house of worship regularly. Or, perhaps, the threat of a life-threatening disease opens us up to the possibility of grace. As Americans and people around the world seek answers during this strangest of times, I suspect millions of others will seek spiritual solace along with the medical tests that may foretell each individual's degree of suffering or reprieve. In the meantime, social-distancing and self-quarantine these next couple of weeks (or longer) offer opportunities we might not otherwise have had. I was struck by Hanke's plea that we embrace the slowing-down. Some people may feel lonely as they ride out the virus in isolation; others may feel crowded by large families or rambunctious children. But many will also have a chance to enjoy that rarest of pleasures – or perhaps torments – free time. The 17th-century philosopher Blaise Pascal said that all of humanity's problems stem from man's inability to sit alone in a room. On normal days, for many of us, it's off to the races preceded by a rude and ruthless alarm. There are stocks to trade, newspapers to publish, movies to direct, businesses to run, children to educate, invalids to feed and, yes, wars to wage. So accustomed are we to the weird virtue of multi-tasking that the notion of sitting alone in a room can be more angst-inducing than a multitude of alternatives. Now, suddenly, there's time to think – to read, write, paint, build, create. Time for long walks, time to pay attention to the arrival of spring and time to listen. Grace, they say, comes to those who listen. Of course, so much time will drive some people crazy, so it really is a challenge as well as an opportunity. Binge-watching movies is also an option, don't get me wrong. As a highly functional obsessive-compulsive, I've already reorganized my refrigerator to within an inch of its life and am plotting other projects that will leave no molecule unturned. Who knows what will come of all this? When Shakespeare was quarantined during the plague, he wrote "King Lear." The only book I ever wrote was while I had a broken leg, a lesser contribution to the arts, I concede. Perhaps I'll write another – or at least long letters to friends I never meant to set aside. I've often said that America needs a common enemy to make us come together – to solve the riddle of partisan gridlock and to become one, united nation again. Perhaps, COVID-19 is that foe. Hanke closed out his sermon by reminding us that it doesn't matter whether we are lined up in pews or piled on a sofa with a gaggle of giggly children waving to their Sunday School pals on a computer. What matters, in good times as well as bad, is people and community. It has taken a terrible virus to at least remind us of this eternal truth. Surely, there is grace in that. Embracing the grace of COVID-19

An odd thing happened last Sunday. A friend was visiting and invited me to join her for church – not in a physical house of worship but streamed via Zoom from her pastor in Arlington, Virginia. Churches around the state are suspending services, and the Rev. David Hanke of Restoration Anglican Church was road-testing Zoom with congregants who wanted to worship virtually. Jody and I sat side-by-side, possibly in our pj's, while Hanke fidgeted with various audio and visual gadgets. Fellow parishioners – some solo, some couples, others families – came into focus in a Hollywood Squares grid along one side of the screen.

Most were casually dressed, as was Hanke, who was seated in his office. At one count, more than 100 had joined the service, which meant that at least 200 would have been seated in the pews on a pre-coronavirus Sunday. Zoom, which I hadn't experienced previously, made possible what the virus had made impossible – the gathering of community in common prayer and worship. Who knows what will come of all this? When Shakespeare was quarantined during the plague, he wrote "King Lear." The only book I ever wrote was while I had a broken leg, a lesser contribution to the arts, I concede. Perhaps I'll write another – or at least long letters to friends I never meant to set aside. I've often said that America needs a common enemy to make us come together – to solve the riddle of partisan gridlock and to become one, united nation again. Perhaps, COVID-19 is that foe. Hanke closed out his sermon by reminding us that it doesn't matter whether we are lined up in pews or piled on a sofa with a gaggle of giggly children waving to their Sunday School pals on a computer. What matters, in good times as well as bad, is people and community. It has taken a terrible virus to at least remind us of this eternal truth. Surely, there is grace in that. While we all remain calm, vigilant and informed, our reporters will continue to fight for answers. We will continue to do our best during this time. Although the doors of our building are shut, we remain committed to keeping the doors of the government open, always. When we get answers, we will report them. Together, we are strong.

Most were casually dressed, as was Hanke, who was seated in his office. At one count, more than 100 had joined the service, which meant that at least 200 would have been seated in the pews on a pre-coronavirus Sunday. Zoom, which I hadn't experienced previously, made possible what the virus had made impossible – the gathering of community in common prayer and worship. At one point, some attempted to sing a hymn a cappella. Let's just say, the Apostle's Creed and the Lord's Prayer were smoother. More novel than the virtual service was the experience of joining a friend of 20 years in prayer. Our more-natural bonding experiences have revolved over the years around journalism and, in the sole interest of anthropological research, shopping. For just a moment, I wasn't sure which pitch and volume I should seek. But something happened that was both personal and intimate – and yet of all one thing. Perhaps this is why so many people attend a house of worship regularly. Or, perhaps, the threat of a life-threatening disease opens us up to the possibility of grace. As Americans and people around the world seek answers during this strangest of times, I suspect millions of others will seek spiritual solace along with the medical tests that may foretell each individual's degree of suffering or reprieve. In the meantime, social-distancing and self-quarantine these next couple of weeks (or longer) offer opportunities we might not otherwise have had. I was struck by Hanke's plea that we embrace the slowing-down. Some people may feel lonely as they ride out the virus in isolation; others may feel crowded by large families or rambunctious children. But many will also have a chance to enjoy that rarest of pleasures – or perhaps torments – free time. The 17th-century philosopher Blaise Pascal said that all of humanity's problems stem from man's inability to sit alone in a room. On normal days, for many of us, it's off to the races preceded by a rude and ruthless alarm. There are stocks to trade, newspapers to publish, movies to direct, businesses to run, children to educate, invalids to feed and, yes, wars to wage. So accustomed are we to the weird virtue of multi-tasking that the notion of sitting alone in a room can be more angst-inducing than a multitude of alternatives. Now, suddenly, there's time to think – to read, write, paint, build, create. Time for long walks, time to pay attention to the arrival of spring and time to listen. Grace, they say, comes to those who listen. Of course, so much time will drive some people crazy, so it really is a challenge as well as an opportunity. Binge-watching movies is also an option, don't get me wrong. As a highly functional obsessive-compulsive, I've already reorganized my refrigerator to within an inch of its life and am plotting other projects that will leave no molecule unturned. Who knows what will come of all this? When Shakespeare was quarantined during the plague, he wrote "King Lear." Life in the time of COVID-19

I was at the supermarket Sunday and ran into a colleague who lives nearby. We were chatting – from a safe distance – about how the way we work has changed over the past week. Then a neighbor of mine, a longtime but not close acquaintance, walked up to say hello and extended his hand. Reflexively, I shook it. Oh boy. My colleague must have noticed the panic in my eyes.

Eugene Robinson

When both he and the neighbor had drifted away, I made a beeline for the restroom, where I washed my hands far longer than the requisite 20 seconds. Then I went back to my cart, cleaned the handle with a sanitary wipe – for the second time – and was able to resume my foraging for random food items that my wife and I might or might not need during a period of semi-isolation of open-ended duration.

Decades ago, my favorite author, Gabriel Garcia Marquez, wrote a novel entitled "Love in the Time of Cholera." Today, someone needs to write a Netflix screenplay called "Life in the Time of COVID-19." Our lives have changed. In my household, we understand and take seriously the mandate for "social distancing." We understand that if, in six months or so, the disruption we're experiencing now looks like an overreaction – if we don't suffer the horrors seen in China or Italy and end up with relatively few deaths – the measures we're taking now will have worked. We will have bent the now-famous curve and kept the disease from overwhelming our health system. What we don't understand – because nobody seems to know – is how long this hunkering down has to last. We don't fully understand the dimensions of our sequestration, because they keep changing. And it is clear by now that there will be no rational, reassuring leadership from President Trump. We're on our own.

My wife and I are in an age group that has to be more concerned about the prospect of contracting the virus than, say, our millennial sons. But we're not so old or infirm that we feel we have to go beyond distancing to total isolation – and that wouldn't be feasible anyway. Each day, then, involves a series of decisions. Do I really need to pick up the dry cleaning? If I wait until later in the week, will the dry cleaner still be open? The fact that the rules and restrictions keep changing is probably a good thing, because it means people are taking the threat more seriously. But it discourages procrastination. If there are errands I believe I can run safely, there is an incentive to do today what I might not be able to do tomorrow – or, perhaps, for an indefinite period of time.

I miss going to the office. I've worked in newsrooms all my adult life, and I miss the bustle and excitement. Somehow, perhaps counterintuitively, it helps me concentrate. But the sensible policy at The Washington Post is that those who can work at home should do so. This morning I wrote down my 16-character password for the Post network on a business card and tucked it into my wallet, because I don't know when I'll get to my office again and don't want to have to go crawling to the IT folks because I've forgotten how to sign on.

Schools are out, and my neighborhood has lots of children who can only bounce off the walls for so long before their parents have to let them outside. Unfortunately, we have to give them a wide berth. I look at happy, friendly, well-behaved boys and girls and – not being paranoid here – I see potential asymptomatic vectors of serious disease. I'll still be watching the presidential campaign, but what kind of campaign will it be? The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention posted a recommendation against gatherings of 50 or more people for the next eight weeks. For former Vice President Joe Biden, 77, and Sen. Bernie Sanders, 78 – both in the vulnerable age group – this means no rallies, no handshaking, certainly no baby-kissing. For voters, it means that standing in line at polling places exposes them to some degree of risk.

Normally, I'd be preparing to go to New York to participate in MSNBC's coverage of Tuesday's Florida, Ohio, Illinois and Arizona primaries. But the network has decided not to ask contributors to travel, and I wouldn't be comfortable spending time in train stations or airport security lines, so I won't have to pack my suitcase to go anywhere. Maybe the trip to the dry cleaner can wait after all. Eugene Robinson's email address is euGENERobinson@washpost.com.

The missing final chapter of Orson Bean’s life

Orson Bean answered the same question many times during his crazy ride from Broadway to doing every conceivable kind of work during his decades in Hollywood.

What was this funny guy trying to do, while embracing drugs, edgy politics, sexual healing, hippie communes, experimental forms of therapy and other diversions involving his body, mind and soul?

On one occasion, Bean said he was trying to become the “happiest son of a b---- alive.” In another Los Angeles Times interview, he added: “I did all this stuff – the drugs, getting my kisser on the tube – because I thought it would make me happy. But it didn’t work. I didn’t find happiness until I learned to surrender, to give up the crazy pursuit.”

Surrender to what? The answer to that question didn’t make it into the media tributes after the 91-year-old Bean’s death on Feb. 7, when he was hit by two cars while walking in his Venice, California, neighborhood. However, the answer has hiding in plain sight in several cable TV interviews, his one-man stage show and an online testimony he wrote entitled “How Orson Bean Found God.”

“For most of my life I didn’t believe in God,” noted Bean. “Who had time? I was too busy with things of this world: getting ahead, getting laid, becoming famous.

“For most of my adult life I’ve been at least somewhat famous. Not so famous that I had to wear dark glasses to walk down the street, but famous enough that head waiters would give me a good table. I didn’t want to be famous for its own sake. I wanted to be famous so as to be happy.”

What finally turned Bean’s life around was a religious conversion. He went looking for the “Higher Power” in his 12-step program and eventually found peace.

Many Hollywood people who knew Bean were amazed that the final act in his wild life – from Communist sympathizer to father-in-law of the late conservative raconteur Andrew Breitbart – didn’t make it into news reports.

There was a lot of territory to cover. Bean’s work was known by multiple generations – from “What’s My Line” to “Desperate Housewives,” from his many appearances on “The Tonight Show starring Johnny Carson” to the surrealist classic “Being John Malkovich.” Bean was pre-hip, then hip, and finally a kind of ironic post-hip.

In the obituaries, journalists “got the blacklist thing in there, of course, because that’s still a major sign of status in Hollywood,” said Barbara Nicolosi Harrington, a former Catholic nun who became a screenwriter and film-studies professor. “But the fact is that this man was not just a vague believer of some kind, but one of the stalwart members of the Christian community in Hollywood. That’s how Orson’s story ends.”

That final chapter began when guys in his 12-step addiction-recovery group challenged him to pin some identity to his own Higher Power.

Finally, a tattooed tough guy who was just out of prison told Bean: “Get down on your knees and thank God every morning. Then do it again at night.” Bean said he wasn’t sure he believed in God. And why kneel? The ex-con said: God likes people to kneel.

That night, Bean knelt by his bed and, “feeling like a complete fool,” said out loud: “If there’s anybody there, thank you for the day.” Then he kept doing it, morning and night.

“Without my even being aware of it, it stopped feeling foolish to me,” he wrote. “It started to feel good, in fact. After a while, I began to sense that my prayers were being heard. I didn’t know by who or what. ... Then, before I knew it, I felt as if there was Something or Someone there who knew me and cared about me. Actually loved me.”

In the old days, said Harrington, the Hollywood establishment would accept this kind of vague faith. With Bean, however, that faith became very specific and visible.

“The key thing in Hollywood, back in those days, was to be able to say, ‘I am spiritual, but I am not CHURCHY.’ ... These days, serious religious faith is a sign that you’re not intelligent, that you just don’t get it,” she said. “That was the problem with Orson Bean. He got CHURCHY, and he didn’t mind telling people about it.”

I remember coming home from church years ago with my wife silent and upset. When I pushed the subject, she turned to me with tears and said, “How can you do that?” Do what? The “what” was being in an argument with my wife, or kids upset and angry, and walk into the church all smiles and pretend as if nothing happened. Ever do that? Try to deflect or hide what’s going on, because it’s uncomfortable or embarrassing – because of how it reflects on you?

Do you want people to think of you a certain way, want them to see you all put together or pretty, see you as being sharp in conversation or shredded in the gym? Want to get those likes to the last thing you said on social media? Even in the church – maybe especially in the church – you want to get recognition for being there, want people to see you a certain way (which is a temptation especially for church leaders!). We start picking up how to look and sound a certain way, often afraid that someone will find out about the chaos really going on in our houses.

We start worshipping at the idol of glory in the world’s eyes.

Jesus said, “I have come in My Father’s name, and you do not receive Me; if another shall come in his own name, you will receive him. How can you believe, when you receive glory from one another, and you do not seek the glory that is from the one and only God?” (John 5:43-44 NAS) Also: “He who speaks from himself seeks his own glory; but He who is seeking the glory of the One who sent Him, He is true, and there is no unrighteousness in Him.” (John 7:18 NAS)

Isn’t that profound? Where have I been seeking to look good to shallow people, sound smart to cynical people, get honors from disreputable people, gain worldly wealth from salespeople, or garner security from unsafe people? It’s sobering.

Looking around these days, glory looks a lot different. Now I think of when a buddy came into church humbled, confessing that he had lost his temper and had to apologize to his wife when they got to the church, and how it drew them closer. I think of the woman who publicly praised the pastor’s wife who had given a kind word at a down moment. I think of a young woman who led a team to complete a service project at the athletic fields, or all the volunteers at the kids program sharing Scripture and life lessons with children, some of whom are coming from tough circumstances, or the men who dropped what they were doing to help out the widow whose plumbing broke, or the friends who brought meals to the family whose loved one is in the hospital, or others who stopped to pray with them in the hospital room – each just a moment of honest compassion, but with lasting impact that reflects inward grace, an internal glory from above.

There is one source of glory that’s not cheap, temporary or futile. That comes from being brutally honest before the One who sees through the posturing and confessing to God and others where I was in it for myself. Glory comes from seeking what is good and right in His eyes and sharing that to build others up. Real glory comes from giving our lives to follow Jesus so that we get to reflect His glory from a life forgiven and set free.

I pray that you would know the glory of the one and only God, through His Son Jesus Christ.

“May the God of peace, who through the blood of the eternal covenant brought back from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great Shepherd of the sheep, equip you with everything good for doing his will, and may he work in us what is pleasing to him, through Jesus Christ, to whom be glory forever and ever. Amen. (Hebrews 13:20-21 NIV)

DIVINE DESTINY

As children we attempt to determine the unknown. What profession will we choose? Will we marry and have a family? Where will we live? As we grow there are many forks in the road, even basic decisions can be difficult. Yet, when we shape our lives with God at the center, the journey is easier. If we design our lives with God's will in mind, we will reap the wisdom of His Word, the serenity borne of faith, and the strength for untold tomorrows. Worship each week and follow your divine destiny.

Siena basketball team in isolation over virus concerns

LOUDONVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — Siena College's men's basketball team, coaches and staff have been told to self-isolate until March 25 as a precaution after two officials who called the school's last game tested positive for the coronavirus.

Siena spokesman Mike Demos said Thursday the school learned earlier in the week that two officials who worked Siena's game against Manhattan in the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference Tournament on Wednesday, March 11 at Jim Whelan Boardwalk Hall in Atlantic City, New Jersey had tested positive for COVID-19.

MLB gives minor leaguers spring per diems; salaries TBD

NEW YORK (AP) — Philadelphia Phillies minor leaguer Logan O'Hoppe got the news from his agent and relayed it immediately to teammate Vito Friscia.

Friscia, a 40th-round draft pick, would be getting his spring training pay, after all.

"He thought I was kidding," O'Hoppe said. "It's awesome, I'm happy for him."

Major League Baseball announced Thursday that minor league players shut out of spring training camps will receive allowances from teams through April 8, and a plan is underway to compensate those players during the postponed portion of the regular season.

Minor leaguers will receive their allowances — usually $100-400 per week — from teams in a lump sum. The payments will cover allowances due starting Thursday.

State athletics body argues it's not subject to Title IX

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — The organization that oversees high school sports in Connecticut is arguing in a court filing that it is not subject to the federal law that guarantees equal access to women and girls in education, including athletics.

The argument that the Connecticut Interscholastic Athletic Conference is exempt from Title IX comes as lawyers outline their positions in a lawsuit by three female runners who are seeking to block the participation of transgender athletes in girls sports.

Wabash's Elijah Vander Velden finishes a layup on a fastbreak during the Apaches game against Peru.

Vander Velden named Academic All-State

By STAFF REPORTS

Seventy-one Indiana high school seniors — 39 boys and 32 girls — have been chosen as first-team Academic All-State by the Indiana Basketball Coaches Association, it was announced Tuesday.

In addition, 188 more boys and 189 more girls were recognized as honorable mention Academic All-State for 2020.

Wabash's Elijah Vander Velden earned a spot on the first-team Academic All-State side while a host of boys and girls from Wabash County earned honorable mention honors.

On the girls' side, Wabash's Maya Benysh was named an honorable mention.

For the boys, Southwood's Jackson

Simons and Manchester's Korbin Hensley, Kreedon Krull and Caleb Stout were all named honorable mentions.

IBCA Academic All-State team is a program where academic prowess and athletic prowess both are considered in the selections.

Items such as grade-point average, college board scores and academic class rank are considered along with athletic performance in areas such as points per game, rebounds per game and assists per game.

IBCA-member head coaches from schools across the state may nominate their seniors who meet criteria that include a 3.5 GPA or higher on a 4.0 scale, a class rank in the upper 25 percent of one's class, an SAT score of 1,100 (on the reading and math sections) or an ACT composite score of 24.

Once nominations are received, an IBCA committee reviews the information and determines awards for first team and honorable mention. Those selected will receive certificates from the IBCA for their honor. Those certificates will be distributed to coaches at the annual IBCA Clinic on April 24-25 at Lawrence North High School in Indianapolis. The coaches then present the certificates to the honored players after they return from the clinic.

Vander Velden was second on the Apaches in scoring with 12.8 points while leading the team in rebounding at 8.9 per game and blocks at 4.0 per game. The 97 blocks rank eighth in the state overall.

Rams release star RB Gurley as NFL moves continue

By BARRY WILNER
AP Pro Football Writer

Todd Gurley has gone from the NFL's top running back to looking for a job.

In a move designed to save the Los Angeles Rams about $10 million that would have become guaranteed Thursday, they said goodbye to Gurley. Perhaps the game's best rusher in 2017 and '18 but plagued by knee problems lately, Gurley has been sent on a route diametrically opposite to such big names as Tom Brady, headed to Tampa, and Philip Rivers, now with Indianapolis.

Los Angeles still will get a $20.15 million hit on its salary cap space. Gurley, a 2015 first-round pick, signed a four-year, $60 million contract with $45 million guaranteed in June 2018.

But after helping the Rams to the NFC title that season, he injured his left knee and it slowed him considerably — first in the postseason run to the Super Bowl, then all of last season. He rushed for a career-low 857 yards last year while playing sparingly.

His release can't be comforting to other running backs around the NFL.

If Gurley is expendable — yes, the contract and injury played a key role — then can any RB feel secure?

Earlier Thursday, the Lions agreed to trade their best cornerback, Darius Slay, to Philadelphia. Agent Drew Rosenhaus confirmed the trade and that Slay has agreed to a three-year, $50 million extension with the Eagles.

Slay wanted a new contract before last season and did not attend Detroit's mandatory minicamp. He ended up reporting to training camp and played well enough to earn a third Pro Bowl nod.

The Eagles need help in the secondary. Cornerback Ronald Darby is not expected to return, and the team is not bringing back safety Malcolm Jenkins.

Denver waived 2013 Super Bowl MVP Joe Flacco. He had lost his job to rookie Drew Lock and also has neck issues that could affect him if he continues playing.

The Ravens confirmed their trade for veteran defensive end Calais Campbell.

Also Thursday, the NFL changed course and will be allowing teams to announce signings they have reached with free agents, as well as trades, when all paperwork is filed.

Though the league's business year began Wednesday the NFL instructed teams to hold back direct confirmations of those transactions because they are not official until contracts are signed and players have taken physicals. The agreements and trades leaked out anyway.

NCAA Tournament: Big shots that define the madness of March

By DAVE SKRETTA
AP Basketball Writer

This is the time of year people usually start tweeting at Ali Farokhmanesh.

The Northern Iowa fans who remember his back-to-back buzzer-beaters to beat UNLV and Kansas and usher the Panthers to the Sweet 16 of the NCAA Tournament a decade ago. The Missouri and Kansas State fans still thankful he helped take down the top-seeded Jayhawks. And yes, there will be Kansas fans still pained by the memory.

"I mean, any time someone brings it up to me or somebody randomly tweets at me, or something along those lines, it brings me back," Farokhmanesh told The Associated Press this week. "And honestly, normally this time of the year is when I start thinking about that — thinking about when I was playing."

Nothing is normal this year, though. There will be no last-second heroics in the NCAA Tournament after the outbreak of the coronavirus led to its cancellation. There will be no underdogs taking down basketball bluebloods, or previously unheralded kids becoming household names because of their heroics during the madness of March.

Instead, basketball fans will be left — like Farokhmanesh — to reflect on the big games, big shots and big moments that have come to define the NCAA Tournament as one of the most heart-stopping sporting events in the country.

For Farokhmanesh, it is not necessarily the 3-pointer in the final minute that took down Kansas in the second round of the 2010 tournament that jumps to the forefront of his mind. It's the shot he hit two days earlier, a 3 from well beyond the arc in the final seconds, that gave the Panthers a 69-66 victory over the Runnin' Rebels.

"That one gets completely passed up," said Farokhmanesh, now an assistant at Colorado State. "Magnitude-wise Kansas was bigger, but the UNLV game, that was crazy too, because it was back and forth and we got lucky enough to have the last possession, and it was crazy because they were double-teaming us. I was pretty deep and let it fly."

There are plenty of other players in the history of the NCAA Tournament that have earned them a spot in the history books:

THE SHOT

Christian Laettner hit plenty of memorable ones, including the winning jumper against Connecticut in the 1990 regional final and the winning foul shots against UNLV in the 1991 national semifinals. But it was his catch-and-shoot off a full-court pass from Grant Hill to beat Kentucky in double-overtime of their 1992 regional final that became historic.

"I don't realize what happened," Laettner said afterward. "I just caught the ball, turned around and made the shot."

FOR THE WIN

Villanova and North Carolina had already played a championship classic in 2016 when the Tar Heels' Marcus Paige hit a 3 to tie the game 74-all with 4.7 seconds left. The Wildcats in-bounded the ball and Ryan Arcidiacono pushed up the floor, then dished to Kris Jenkins, who released the winning 3 as time expired to set off pandemonium inside NRG Stadium.

"I watched it one time," Villanova coach Jay Wright told AP this week. "I watch game film right after the game. That one I didn't. So I remember the day after the parade, our family said, 'We're going to sit down and we're going to watch this game.' We did it. The whole family sat down and watched the game and that was the only time I watched it."

THE PERFECT MISS

To this day, North Carolina State's Dereck Whittenburg jokes his deep jumper that came up woefully short against Houston in the 1983 title game was really the perfect pass. Regardless, the Wolfpack's Lorenzo Charles was in the perfect spot to make the catch, drop the ball through the net and send Jim Valvano racing across the court like a mad man.

THE SLIPPER FIT

In the pantheon of Cinderella teams, the 1998 bunch from Valparaiso are near the top of the list, and the biggest reason is Bryce Drew's winning shot against Mississippi. With the No. 13 seed Crusaders trailing with 2.5 seconds left, Bill Jenkins caught an in-bound pass from Jaime Sykes and got it to Drew, who let loose a shot as time expired. It gave Valpo a 70-69 win.

Where Friends Meet Friends.

Man leaves wife, daughters at curb after birthday dinner

DEAR ABBY: I coordinated and paid for a 70th birthday party for my terminally ill husband. Fourteen people were invited, and seven of them were related to my only sister, “Carla.”

During the dinner, her husband was rude to the waitress and at the end of the party was screaming and yelling at Carla over the valet parking ticket. As they left the restaurant, he shoved her. He then got in their car and left my sister and her stepdaughters (from a previous marriage) standing there. They had to order a rideshare to get home.

I texted her later to be sure she and the girls had arrived safely. She said yes and told me she would talk to me the next day. When I didn’t hear from her, I followed up. The next time we talked, she acted like nothing had happened! When I pursued the discussion and asked what prompted his strange behavior, she said, “I don’t know what to tell you.” I said, “You don’t know?” and she replied, “I didn’t say that. I said I don’t know what to tell YOU.”

After a lengthy discussion, I told her that unless we had some assurance that the incident wouldn’t be repeated, we didn’t want to see her husband again. She said it wouldn’t be a problem. I have invited her to numerous family events, and she comes solo, but now she is blaming me for “tearing the family apart.” What can I do now, if anything? – In A Mess In California

DEAR IN A MESS: Your sister is apparently married to an abuser with a short fuse and has resigned herself to it. She has my sympathy, but she should not blame you for any of it. She could really use some help from a support group for abused partners, because things will not get better. If you prefer not to see her horror of a husband, stand your ground and do not allow yourself to be guilted or coerced into it. He owes all of you an apology.

DEAR ABBY: I am engaged to a wonderful, sweet, hard-working 30-year-old man. We get along well and make each other happy. The trouble is how he comes across to others. He is so eager to be friends that he opens up much too quickly, revealing and venting about things like his work problems. It makes people uncomfortable.

He has been called out on it several times by various people (some even straight-up called him “creepy”), and he will stop for a while. But he falls into the same pattern the next time he meets somebody new. This whole thing is made worse by his anxiety; when someone calls him out on this behavior, he experiences crippling panic attacks. They cause him to apologize profusely, which only exacerbates the problem.

He refuses to seek therapy or treatment for his anxiety. I am at a loss about how to help him, other than listen to his troubles and offer support when I can. What should I do? – Challenged Fiancee

DEAR FIANCEE: Your fiancé may be a great guy, but unless you want to spend your life with a partner who refuses to get help for his emotional problems and doesn’t seem to learn from his mistakes, it may be time to step back and reevaluate this relationship. Much as you would like to, you can’t fix what’s wrong with him. Only he can do that. If you marry him, the chances are you will wind up as socially isolated as he is. What a shame.

God reconciles the world to himself

From the writings of the Rev. Billy Graham

Q: There’s widespread hatred for the God of the Bible so I’m puzzled at the statement that God reconciles the world to himself. What does that mean? – G.R.

A: In His 33 years on earth, Jesus suffered with man; on the cross He suffered for man. “God was reconciling the world to himself in Christ” (2 Corinthians 5:19, NIV). An important verse to memorize is: “God demonstrates His own love for us in this: While we were still sinners, Christ died for us” (Romans 5:8, NIV). He reached out to mankind in spite of its disobedience and rebellion and made a way out of worldliness that does not know God. God’s love did not begin at the cross. It began in eternity before the world was established, before the time clock of civilization began to move. The concept stretches our minds to their utmost limits. Imagine what God was planning when the earth was “without form and void.” There was only a deep, silent darkness of outer space that formed a vast gulf before the brilliance of God’s throne. God was designing the mountains and the seas, the flowers and the animals. He was planning the bodies of His children and all their complex parts. How could creation be by chance? Even before the first dawn, He knew all that would happen. The Bible tells us about the “Lamb who was slain from the creation of the world” (Revelation 13:8, NIV). God foresaw what His Son was to suffer. It has been said there was a cross in the heart of God long before the cross was erected at Calvary. It is overwhelming to consider the wonder and greatness of His love for us.

God’s love put His words of promise into our hearts, that we might know Jesus who bears our burdens and lifts us up.

The Offeror's or Bidder's attention is called to the "Equal Opportunity Clause" and the "Standard Federal Equal Employment Opportunity Construction Contract Specifications" set forth herein. 2. The goals and timetables for minority and female participation, expressed in percentage terms for the Contractor's aggregate workforce in each trade on all construction work in the covered area, are as follows: Goals for minority participation for each trade: Wabash County, IN 3.7% Goals for female participation for each trade: National 6.9% These goals are applicable to all of the Contractor's construction work (whether or not it is Federal or federally assisted) performed in the covered area. If the Contractor performs construction work in a geographical area located outside the covered area, it shall apply the goals established for such geographical area where the work is actually performed. With regard to this second area, the Contractor also is subject to the goals for both its federally involved and non-federally involved construction. The Contractor's compliance with the Executive Order and the regulations in 41 CFR part 60-4 shall be based on its implementation of the Equal Opportunity Clause, specific affirmative action obligations required by the specifications set forth in 41 CFR 60-4.3(a) and its efforts to meet the goals. The hours of minority and female employment and training must be substantially uniform throughout the length of the contract, and in each trade, and the Contractor shall make a good faith effort to employ minorities and women evenly on each of its projects. The transfer of minority or female employees or trainees from Contractor to Contractor or from project to project for the sole purpose of meeting the Contractor's goals shall be a violation of the contract, the Executive Order and the regulations in 41 CFR Part 60-4. Compliance with the goals will be measured against the total work hours performed. 3. The Contractor shall provide written notification to the Director of the Office of Federal Contract Compliance Programs (OFCCP) within 10 working days of award of any construction subcontract in excess of $10,000 at any tier for construction work under the contract resulting from this solicitation. The notification shall list the name, address, and telephone number of the subcontractor; employer identification number of the subcontractor; estimated dollar amount of the subcontract; estimated starting and completion dates of the subcontract; and the geographic area in which the subcontract is to be performed. 4. As used in this notice and in the contract resulting from this solicitation, the "covered area" is Indiana, Wabash County, Wabash. The Wabash Board of Aviation Commissioners, in accordance with the provisions of Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (78 Stat. 252, 42 U.S.C §§ 2000d to 2000d-4) and the Regulations, hereby notifies all bidders or offerors that it will affirmatively ensure that any contract entered into pursuant to this advertisement, disadvantaged business enterprise will be afforded full and fair opportunity to submit bids in response to this invitation and will not be discriminated against on the grounds of race, color, or national origin in consideration for an award. A certified check or bank draft payable to the Wabash Board of Aviation Commissioners, or a satisfactory bid bond, executed by the Bidder and an approved surety company in an amount not less than five (5) percent of the bid, shall be submitted with each bid proposal. Contractors awarded a contract will be required to furnish acceptable surety bonds in the amount of 100% of the awarded contract price. Said performance and material and payment bond shall remain in effect for twelve (12) months. BY: Wabash Board of Aviation Commissioners Wabash, Indiana HSPAXLP. 3/20, 3/27/2020
